General Description of the Course:

Students will learn to define victimization and learn the scope of violent crime in society. The Course includes a review of the issues, prevalence, myths, policies, programs, and services aimed at victims. The class will examine the expanding role of the courts, the police, battered women's shelters, victim/witness assistance programs, crisis intervention units and legislation. The course will also highlight non-conventional conceptions of victimization and international perspectives on victims' rights.

Learning Goals:

A Statement of Principles from the Department of Criminal Justice:

The Program Committee for the Program in Criminal Justice at Rutgers University in New Brunswick has adopted a series of learning goals for students who complete the major. These goals represent the consensus of the faculty regarding the concepts a student should grasp and the skills a student should acquire in the course of completing the major. These goals guide the choices faculty make about the structure of the curriculum and the requirements for our majors. Moreover, they guide faculty and instructors preparing course material and teaching courses.

The Program in Criminal Justice will provide students with a rich understanding of crime and criminal justice in the United States and abroad through an interdisciplinary approach that blends a strong liberal arts educational experience with pre-professional instruction in the field of criminal justice. Graduates of the program will be well-informed citizens on the topic of crime and justice, and qualified for graduate study or for employment as practitioners in a variety of legal, policymaking, and law enforcement fields.

Criminal justice majors graduating from a research university should be able to use critical thinking, factual inquiry, and the scientific approach to solve problems related to individual and group behavior. In addition, students should have an understanding of the legal, political and policymaking processes that affect criminal justice systems in the United States and elsewhere in the world. Finally, students should be familiar with the institutional structures and latest developments in the field in order to engage in meaningful debate about current public policy issues.

Learning Goals for Criminal Justice Majors

1. Competence:

- a. Theory. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand and be able to articulate, both orally and in writing, the core theoretical concepts that form the foundation of analysis and research in criminology and criminal justice today. Core concepts are derived from explanations of crime from a variety of perspectives, including biogenic, psychological, and sociological approaches. There are myriad theories of crime that are informed by these perspectives, including, classical, control, critical, ecology, labeling, learning, strain, and trait-based approaches. Theoretical literacy should extend to multicultural and international understanding.
- b. Institutions. Students who complete the major in criminal justice should understand the special role of three types of institutions: Police, Corrections, and Courts. In addition, students should know how institutional forms vary across jurisdictions and how these institutions interact with and influence each other.
- c. Research Methods. Although not covered in this course, students who complete the criminal justice major should be familiar with the tools, techniques, and data sources necessary for empirical analysis. Students should understand the various ways that empirical analysis is used in the scientific approach: for description, for developing, and for testing theories. They should be able to analyze data using computer applications and should be familiar with basic statistical techniques and regression analysis. They should be able to read and assess research from a wide range of sources, including general interest, academic, and government publications.

2. Critical Thinking:

Upon completion of the major students should be able to apply their understanding of core concepts and quantitative tools to analyze and research real world problems, and evaluate alternative policy proposals on a range of criminal justice issues, from micro-level analyses relevant to particular cases to management concerns to macro-level analyses of legislative and other broad-scale policies. Accomplishment of this goal will require that students can apply their literacy and numeracy skills to different institutional structures, within the U.S. and across countries.

3. Scholarship:

Qualified majors should have an opportunity through such avenues as advanced coursework, internships, and faculty interactions to conduct independent research on matters of central relevance to the field of criminal justice.

Dates of Note:

Topics and Work Cited Page Due = 2/13

Midterm Exam = 2/27

Research Papers Due = 3/13

Final Exam <http://finalexam.rutgers.edu/>

Grades:

20% = Quizzes/Attendance/In-Class assignments

20% = Midterm Exam

25% = Research Paper

35% = Final Exam

Required Texts:

Moriarty, L.J. (2008). Controversies in Victimology (2nd Ed). Newark, NJ: Lexis Nexis Group.

Roberts, A. R. (2006). Handbook on Domestic Violence Intervention Strategies. New York: Oxford University Press

Quizzes, Attendance and In-Class Assignments:

Together these will make up 20% of your grade. Quizzes will only be given as needed and there will be as few or as many as are needed in the course if it is evident that students are not reading (gauged by participation in class discussion). Quizzes and in-class assignments are not available for make-up unless you have an EXCUSED absence, and will be due or assigned upon the first day the student returns to class.

Excuses are outlined by the University, including but not limited to doctor's appointments, funerals, and religious observances; also included are University-sanctioned events such as conferences, athletic events in which one takes part as a University team member, and other such instances. All excused absences must be PRE-APPROVED by the professor unless impossibly be presenting circumstances and all excuse notes become property of the professor. Any counterfeit notes or excuses such as doctor's notes are grounds for failing this course.

Research Paper Assignment for Victims and Domestic Violence:

Select a biographical or auto-biographical account of a victimization event. This book must be published in the last 10 years and be no less than 200 pages. Once you have selected a book it must be approved by the professor, and that title and work cited page is due no later than 02/13/2013.

In addition to reading the book, you will also find 2 research articles in referenced journals that discuss the same type of victimization as in the book you read. These articles MUST come from academic journals, NOT Time Magazine, The NY Times, or anything similar. They may NOT be websites. They may not be books or government documents. They must be no older than publications in 2003. The paper will discuss the experiences of the particular victim and what the research says about that particular type of victim or victimization.

1. Papers are to be written in APA format
2. Papers are to be no less than 5 pages long, this does not include cover pages or reference/work cited pages.
3. All papers will be submitted in Times New Roman font, 12 point, with normal margin pre-sets of one inch on top, bottom, left, and right.
4. There is to be no collaboration with other students on this paper, and cheating, copying or plagiarism in any way is grounds for course failure.
5. The final draft will be due in class on 3/13/2013.

Exam Make-up Policy:

As defined above, only excused absences are grounds for a make-up exam, and MUST be made apparent and approved before the exam start time, including the final.

Special note about movies and other missed work:

Whenever a movie or other clip is shown in class, the notes from that movie will suffice or the film may be borrowed from the professor. As such, it is important that you, as a student, take full responsibility for catching up on any and all missed work that occurs as a result of excused or unexcused absences. Notes and other course materials are the responsibility of the student, and the professor will not provide such work to any student.

Other vital information:

Students with disabilities are advised to contact the department so that arrangements may be made with the instructor to meet special learning needs of the student.

Academic Freedom is a fundamental right in any institution of higher learning. Honesty and integrity are necessary preconditions of this freedom. Academic integrity requires that all academic work be wholly the product of an identified individual or individuals. Joint efforts are legitimate only when the assistance of others is explicitly acknowledged. Ethical conduct is the obligation of every member of the University community, and breaches of academic integrity constitute serious offenses and will be handled as such.

Dishonesty includes but is not limited to: cheating, fabrication, facilitating academic dishonesty, plagiarism, and denying others access to information. For more information on these topics and the penalties available to your professor, please refer to the University Website. If you are dishonest by any of these standards, you will fail this course, NO EXCEPTIONS.
